Recently, we released our first set of DNA information from nearly 100,000 whole genome sequences into the Researcher Workbench. Join us to discuss the transformative research to be done on this data, projects in the works, and a demo on how to use the Workbench.

At the moment, health care is often one-size-fits-all. When we visit the doctor, our treatments are often the same. We think one day health care should be tailored to you. This is called precision medicine. And research can help us get there. How? By creating a resource that may allow researchers to conduct thousands of studies on health and disease. Join us. The future of health begins with you.
